INTRODUCTORY.

WE desire you to know
as much about our business and the goods that we make, as possible, and so
publish this little volume.
Your orders, by mail or by our salesmen, will receive our pains-taking attention.

Perrau, Heidelberg & Co.
Fall & Winter '91 & '92

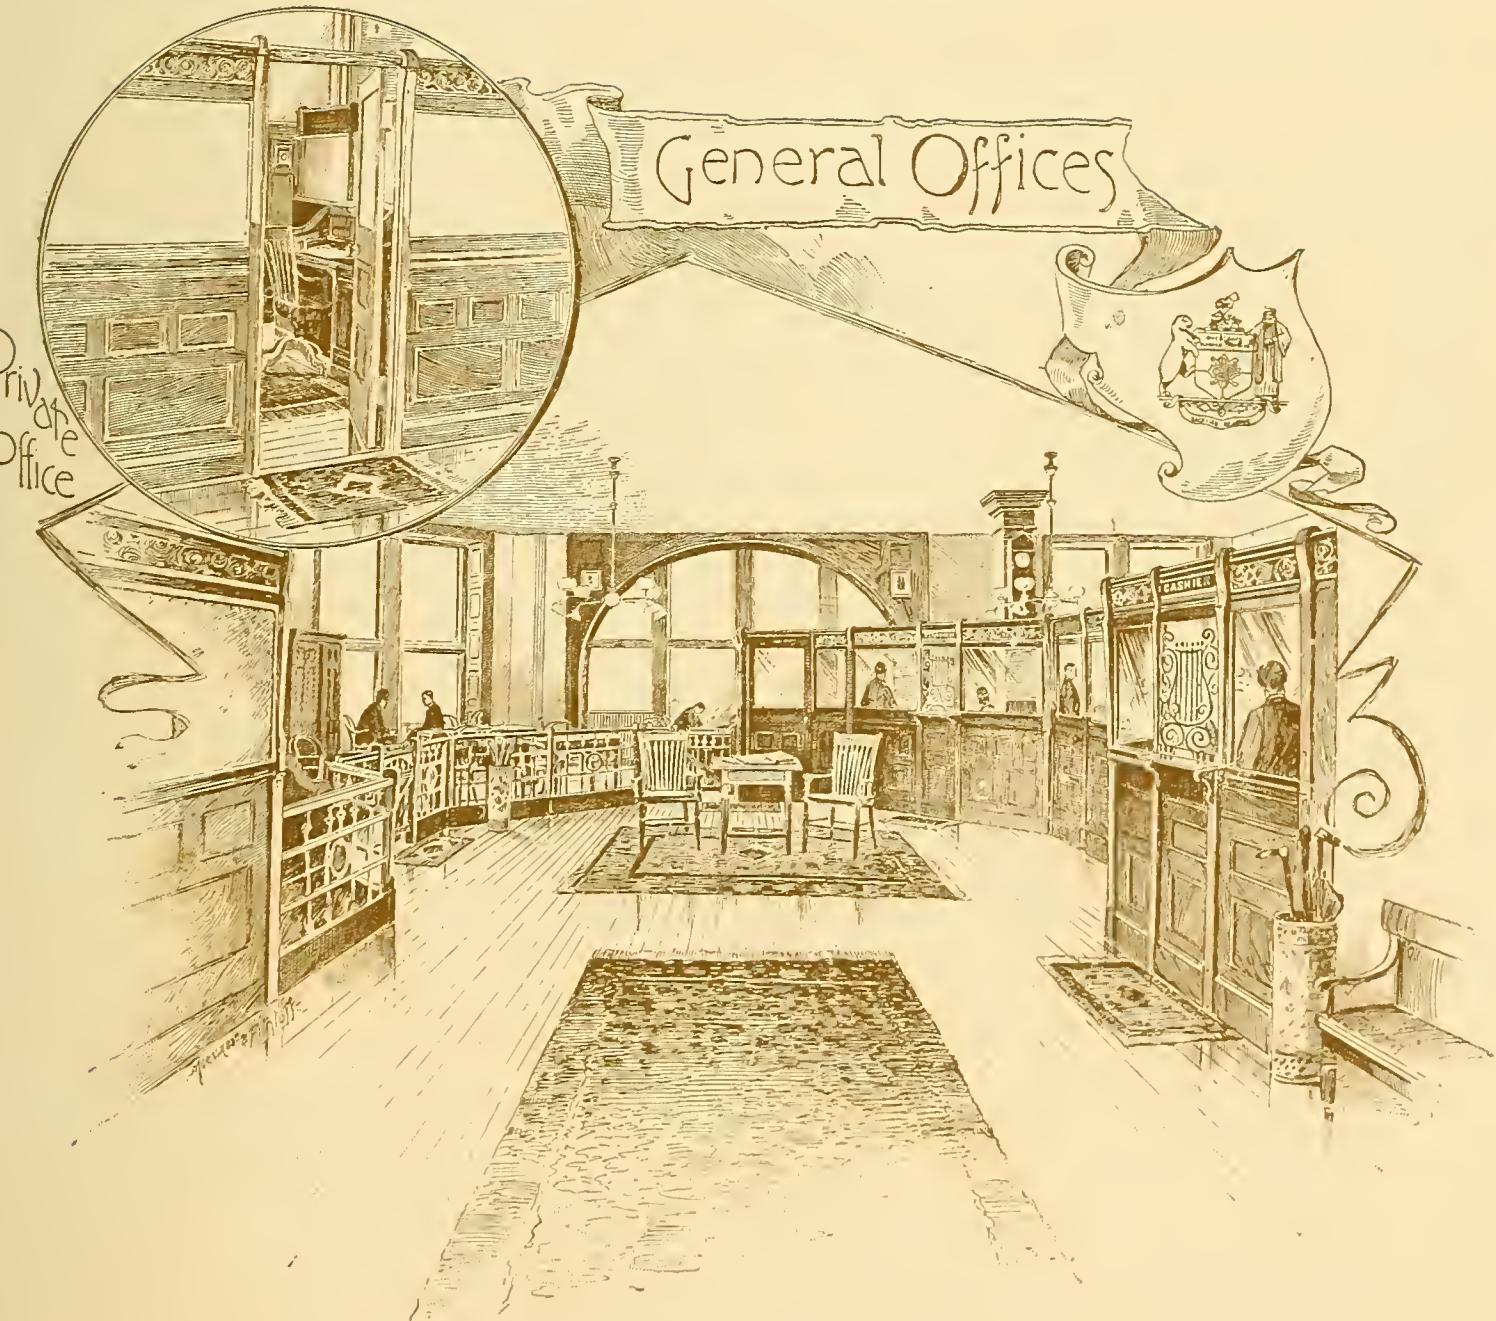

MOST casual wayfarer on Broadway, or the most hurried of business men, is pretty sure to have his attention arrested as he passes the corner of Bleecker street, for there the great architectural rebirth, which has been so marked a feature of later New York, has found one of its most striking expressions in the great business house just occupied by Bierman, Heidelberg & Co.

For many years this corner was a landmark of the New York of a generation ago. Here stood the Manhattan Bank, world-famous through the enormous robbery by which it lost nearly a million dollars. The plain, somewhat severe structure of this institution, in the architectural style that affected an imitation of Greek temples, a year ago was doomed to destruction by the march of business. Even a great financial institution could not afford the extravagance of occupying for its sole use ground whose rentable value with a proper structure upon it would be something like a thousand dollars a week. Therefore one of the landmarks of years ago was swept away, and in its stead arose a magnificent business palace towering skyward eight stories, and with every outward mark of distinction that architecture could supply.

On the ground floor of this fine structure the Manhattan Bank installed itself. The remainder of the building Messrs. Bierman, Heidelberg & Co. acquired for their business home, with a purpose of surpassing in elegance and convenience all that the clothing trade had hitherto known in business establishments. Not long ago this enterprising house held their house warming, and the final touches of the decorator and cabinet makers having just been given to the interior, THE GAZETTE's artist follows hard upon them, and presents to its readers several sketches illustrative of this elegant establishment.

At the very entrance the visitor receives an impression that at once affects him favorably. He has already admired the great mass and the beautiful lines of the fine building; and, as he draws nigh to the entrance, beauties of detail dawn upon him. A deeply recessed arch outlined by row after row of retreating moulding is flanked by massive pilasters of pink sandstone, surmounted by beautifully carved capitals and supporting an architrave of fine proportions and elegant moulding on whose face, carven in stone, is the name of the firm, "Bierman, Heidelberg & Co."

The voussoirs of the arch have given pleasing opportunity to the sculptors' art, and are ornamented with exquisite carvings in high relief, while the successive mouldings are also beautifully shaped. Massive bronze doors close the archway at night, and an additional feature of interest is supplied by finely wrought iron gates, bearing the firm's medallion and name.

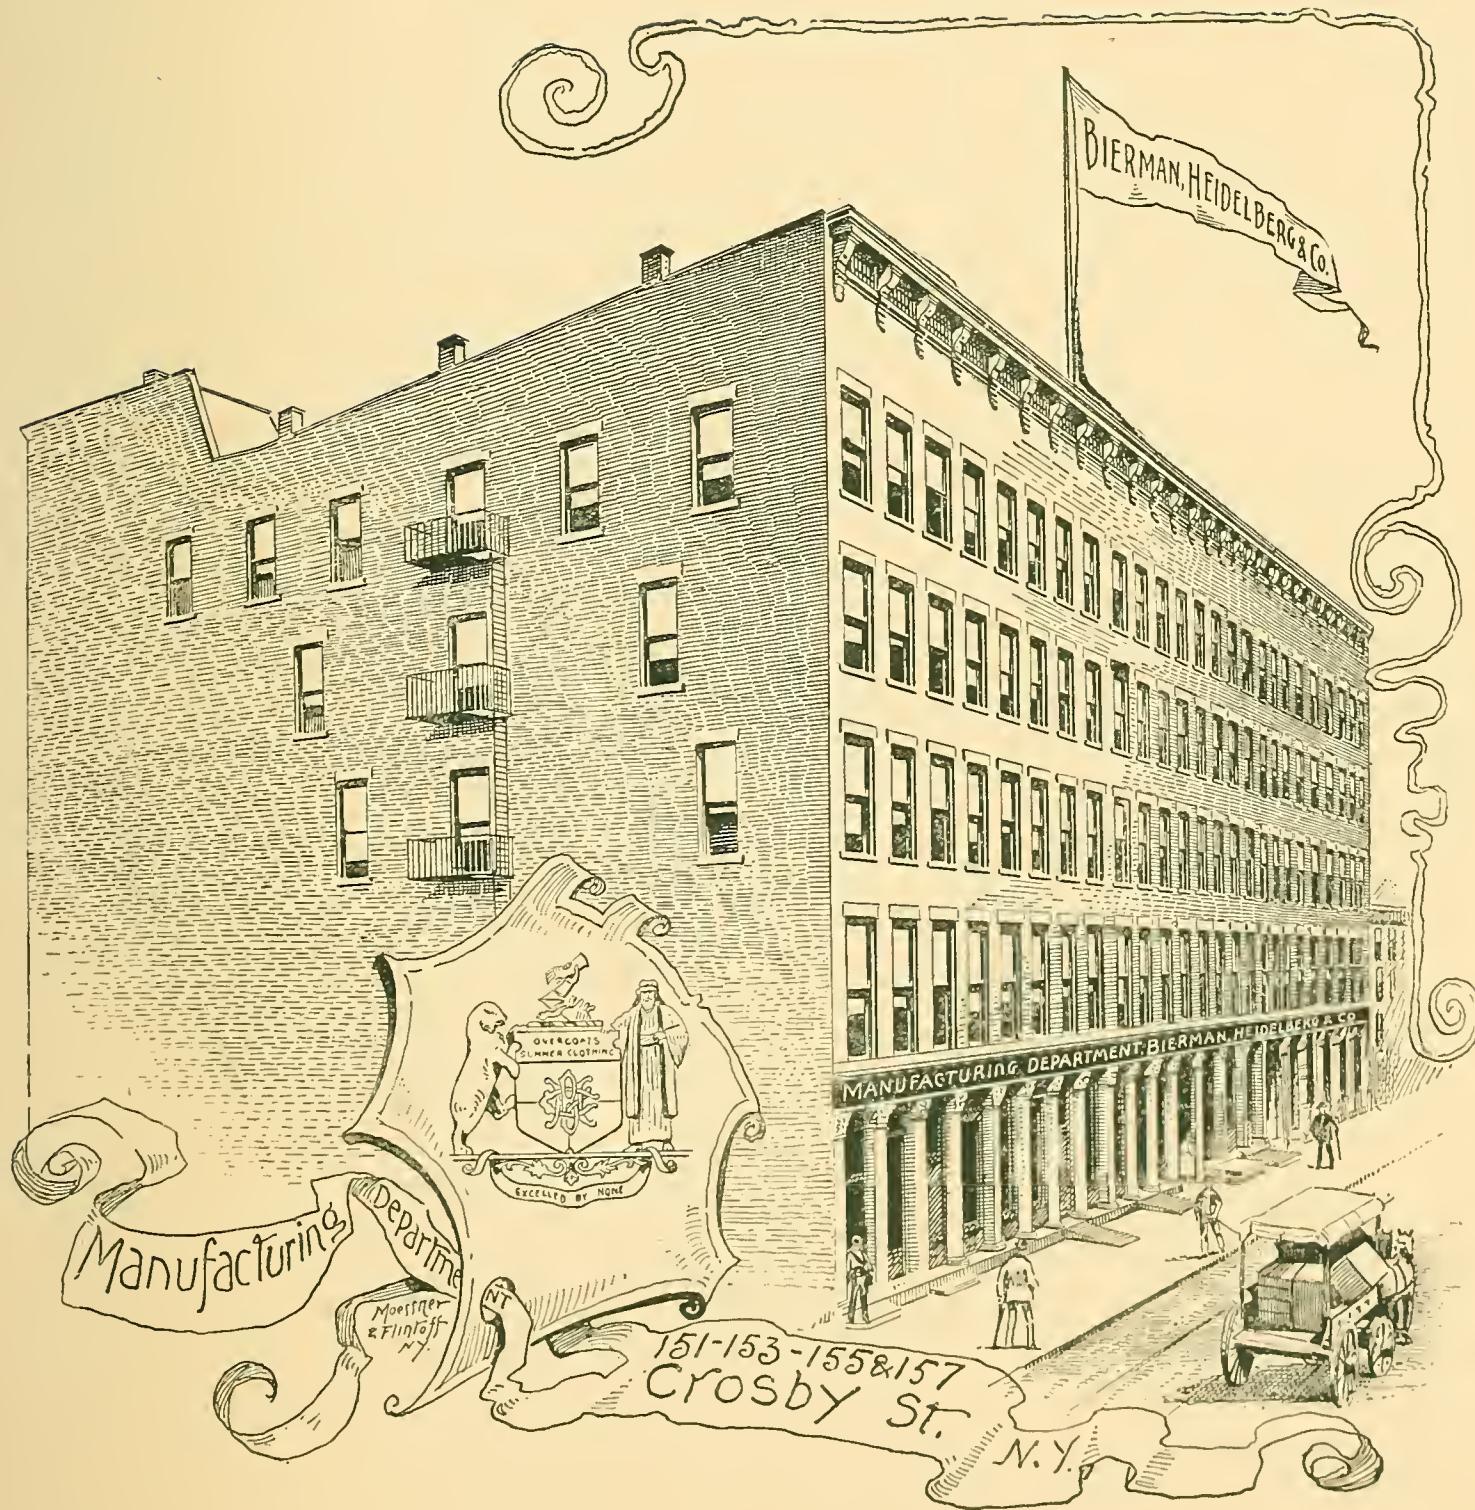

Passing within the arch, one enters a grand vestibule that would not ill become a palace, a type that nowadays is not seldom seen in grand office buildings, but that twenty years ago would have been thought a marvel. The entire hallway is of gray marl-floor, wainscoting and ceiling, and opposite the entrance a solid marble stairway with a graceful gilded balustrade gives access to the upper floors. The whole effect of this entrance is superb, for besides the massive grandeur of the marble walls and imposing stairs, great spaciousness has given all of these features full impressiveness, the architects having planned a noble entrance, and having had room at their disposal to make their plans effective.

Passing into the wide hallway we come upon the more modern way of reaching the upper floors, the elevators, indispensable nowadays that modern luxury has forbidden climbing. Here, too, the touch of the artist is seen : not only utility but beauty has been considered, and the elevators are encased in grillework of iron and brass whose beautiful design fastens the eye and pleases the artistic sense. There are two of these elevators, and there is, therefore, no waiting ; and as we step into the ready car a little ebony imp, who gives one an impression of shining white teeth and a perennial grin, turns a wheel and we shoot skyward at a speed that takes our breath. We have hardly time to note the beauty of the elevator car, its handsome carvings and its spaciousness, before we are landed at Messrs. Bierman, Heidelberg & Co.'s first floor, and entering are conducted into the main offices of what is one of the most elegant clothing houses in New York.

The first impression is that of spaciousness, airiness and light. On three sides are immense arched windows fifteen feet wide, and through these a flood of sunshine illumines the whole interior. The next impression is that of elegant appointments, for we stand upon a polished hardwood floor, at our feet are beautiful Turkish rugs, here is a finely carved library table, there are comfortable leather chairs. On either hand and before us extends the executive offices, private offices and the salesmen's department, all fitted up not merely with an eye to convenience but also with an eye to elegance and beauty.

The arrangement of the departments is unique. The visitor stands in a space which is practically a reception room, and on three sides of this are grouped the offices. At the right are the general offices. A large compartment devoted to salesmen occupies a portion of the front and the left hand side; and the remainder of the left hand side, immediately fronting the entrance, is occupied by the private offices of the members of the firm. The general offices are separated from the reception room by a partition of oak-paneling breast high, surmounted above by plate glass panels extending to a height of seven feet. Above this is a frieze of oak with inlaid panels of bronze. Several windows defended by brass gratings give access to the cashier's, bookkeepers' and other executive departments. Within, the space is divided evenly into several compartments for the use of the various employés of the accounting department. Within the limits of the counting room, separated from it by a partition of plate glass, is the private office of its chief, a pretty little place where all the luxuries of rugs, handsome furniture, and curtains that secure privacy when desired, temper the icy atmosphere that surrounds every well-directed credit department.

Privacy is not an essential to salesmen, and therefore only a railing separates them from the reception room. Within this railing are grouped the desks of some sixteen bright gentlemen who bear the name of Bierman, Heidelberg & Co. to every clime and to all conditions of people, who do credit to it and to themselves by furthering its interests with all the force and shrewdness that is a characteristic of the best salesmen in a branch of business that offers inducements to men of the highest capacity.

Facing the visitor as he enters are the private offices of the several members of the firm. Polished floors, lovely rugs, leather chairs and lounges, and all the other evidences of good taste that nowadays are parts of successful business life are here to be seen. Passing to the rear of the first floor you will find a show of vests that will probably surpass anything of the kind that you have ever seen before. About one-half of this broad floor, 50 by 200 feet, is given over almost exclusively to these articles, and upon these sample racks may be seen vests in every fabric that the mind of man ever conceived desirable for vests. Row after row of racks, tier after tier of show cases and wall cases stretch out in great array, making a veritable museum in which may be seen the whole art of vests.

Atkinson & Flinck

Smoking jackets are also shown here in an array of styles that stretches down two entire sides of the great space. The wide-spreading, arched windows admit an abundance of light, and the decorated walls, the polished floors, and the little touches of good taste here and there give a distinction to the whole that is admirable: but this is only the prelude to the main show. If you are there for business, the next floor is your place: for there the entire great expanse, 200 by 50 feet, is closely packed with sample racks, and three thousand samples, no two alike, will occupy the attention of the careful visitor for many hours.

A Corner in the Tailor Shops

Nothing is lacking to make this superb business establishment a model. Coat rooms, wash rooms, closets and other conveniences all in the most approved style are here. At the rear is a court surrounded by a high wall, to which entrance is gained through a large arched entrance way and massive gates. From this court opens the rear elevator for freight, and the stairway for workmen, all of iron, and carried up in a separate tower from which access to the main building is gained through fire-proof doors.

But this magnificent business home only gives shelter to a part of Bierman, Heidelberg & Co.'s great business. Just at hand, in Crosby street, is their factory, where they occupy six floors 125 feet square, and where 800 workmen and sewing women find employment. Here all their manufacturing is done. Here are the great cloth rooms, storage rooms for stock, the cutters' and the sewing rooms, and here are shipped all of the several million dollars' worth of goods that the enterprising salesmen whom we have seen have entered upon the order books of the house.

The annals of the clothing business do not afford an instance of a more rapid rise to the very front than that of Bierman, Heidelberg & Co. Never has enterprise, industry, and intelligence won a surer reward, and their thousands of friends will unite in congratulating them upon the magnificent establishment which is the outward exponent of their great success. This great success has its roots in one vital factor, popular prices for first-class goods. There was a time when Summer clothing, fine overcoats and similar goods commanded "fancy" profits. Bierman, Heidelberg & Co. have been the "prophets" of low prices from their beginning. That is why they grow.

STORM-PROOF
OF OUR OWN INVENTION.

WATERPROOF OVERGARMENTS FOR GENTLEMEN.

WE have embodied some entirely new and practical ideas in our line of Waterproof and Storm-proof Overcoats, Cape Coats, and Ulsters, that will commend themselves to your best judgment at sight. Samples sent on request.

OVERCOATS.

The result of our efforts to produce a well-balanced and properly assorted stock of Overcoats, embodying all the essential points of style, good tailoring and moderate cost, is more than attained by the line we are now offering to the trade.

1891-92

OVERCOATS.

Last Fall we were "cleaned out" entirely of Ulsters, Cape Overcoats and Reefers.

This gave us a longed-for opportunity to buy the handsome new cloths offered by the leading mills for this purpose.

We bought of the choicest and most serviceable, and made them up into stylish and wearable garments, which we are enabled to offer at "old stock" prices.

OVERCOATS.

We make special lines of Overcoats for stylish men.

These Overcoats will please the fancy and fit the forms of men who are accustomed to have their garments made to measure. The only thing that we "skimp" on these garments is the price, which is very low.

A large, flowing, handwritten signature in brown ink. The signature reads "Pierrepont Heald & Co." The "P" is particularly large and ornate, with a long, sweeping flourish extending to the left. The "H" is also large and has a prominent vertical stroke. The "e" in "Heald" has a long, curved tail extending downwards and to the right. The "d" in "Heald" and the "C" in "Co." also have long, flowing strokes.

FANCY VESTS.

We make a splendidly assorted stock of Fancy Vests, cut in the latest shapes, and made of the handsomest wearable materials woven for this purpose. Prices range from $3.00 to $6.00 for single-breasted, and $3.50 to $7.50 for the double-breasted shapes. Samples sent on request.

A large, flowing, handwritten signature in dark ink. The signature reads "Pierrepont Heald & Co." The "P" is particularly large and stylized, with a long horizontal stroke extending to the left. The "H" is also prominent, with a long vertical stroke. The "e" in "Heald" has a decorative flourish. The "a" and "l" are also written in a flowing script. The "C" at the end of "Co." is a simple loop.
